Curriculum development process

The courses offered by Surana are relevant to local, national, and international needs for growth and development. The content, pedagogy and evaluation of each course are designed to ensure the attainment of the Course Outcomes for that course which in-turn are designed to meet the requirements of POs, PSOs and PEOs of the respective program.

Every department of study that provides a programme, has a Board of Studies (BoS) made up of internal and external members. Faculty members of Surana are internal and subject experts from industry, alumni and other educational institutions are external members, who, after discussion, approve the course syllabus. Each programme includes overall programme outcome, program-specific outcome, and course outcome for each course. Additionally, each course or subject within a specific programme has a course objective that outlines the course's learning outcomes.

Each department's Board of Studies oversees the prerequisites and applicability of every course in the programmes the department provides. As BOS is required to be completed each year, it updates any courses that require it in light of academic trends and market or industrial requirements. Major revision is typically done after a program's duration has ended, even though minor revision is a continuing activity. Since all of Surana's programmes adopted the NEP Scheme in 2021-22, significant adjustments have been made to each programme, and the course objectives and outcomes are now made explicit.

Courses designed by the faculty are recommended for approval in the BoS, where they are discussed and approved, and are forwarded to Academic Council for final ratification.

Additionally, Surana has recently updated its curricula incorporating feedback from students and teachers.
