Section 1. Acting with Integrity

1.1. IBM Values
IBM has long been recognized as one of the world's most ethical companies. Our IBM Values serve as the foundation for the choices our business makes. This Contractor Code of Conduct reflects our standards for ethical behavior and sets forth our expectations of you as an IBM contractor. While nothing in this Code of Conduct alters the employment relationship you have with your employer, your continued work for IBM through your employer is conditioned on your compliance with this Code of Conduct.

1.2. Committing to Integrity and Compliance
Integrity and compliance are vital to IBM's success – and yours. When working on IBM matters, you must follow this Code and applicable IBM policies and processes and comply with all laws and regulations. Always use good judgment in your work. If you have questions about interpreting or applying this Code, ask for help from your IBM contact.

1.3. Keeping Accurate and Complete Records
You need to keep and provide accurate and complete records for IBM. IBM must comply with strict accounting / financial reporting principles and standards and contractual obligations with its customers. Retain information in accordance with your obligations to IBM.

1.4. Maintaining a Healthy Work Environment
IBM strives to maintain a healthy, safe and productive work environment, free from discrimination and harassment, whether based on race, color, religion, gender, gender identity or expression, sexual orientation, national origin, genetics, disability, age or any other personal characteristics that are unrelated to IBM's legitimate business interests. IBM will not tolerate sexual advances or comments, racial or religious slurs or jokes, or any other conduct, such as bullying, that creates or encourages an offensive or intimidating work environment. We encourage you to familiarize yourself with Corporate Instruction HR 116 which applies to contractors who interact in the IBM workplace.

Prohibited conduct includes, but is not limited to:
- Threats or violent behavior;
- Possession of weapons of any type;
- Use, distribution, sale or possession of illegal drugs or any other controlled substance, except those approved for medical purposes;
- Being under the influence of illegal drugs, controlled substances, or alcoholic beverages in the workplace;
- Consumption of alcoholic beverages on IBM premises, unless approved in advance by your IBM contact and your supervisor at your employer.

1.5. Prohibiting and Preventing Bribery
Bribery is a crime and violates IBM policy. You must comply with anti-corruption laws, for example, the U.S. Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA) and the U.K. Anti-Bribery Act.

Do not offer or accept bribes or kickbacks in any form, including referral fees, contingency fees, finder's fees, market assistance or other payment for assistance in finding, influencing or closing a business opportunity. Neither IBMers nor contractors working on IBM's behalf are permitted to request third parties – such as business partners, suppliers, customers, or contractors – to offer or accept bribes in any form on their or IBM's behalf.

If an IBMer or anyone else that you interact with on IBM's behalf asks you to offer or accept anything that appears to be a bribe or kickback or that you are uncertain about, you must immediately report it to both your manager at your employer and your IBM contact or the IBM Procurement Ombudsman.

1.6. Reviewing Travel, Entertainment, and Business Amenities
Under many worldwide anti-corruption laws, it is illegal to provide cash or anything else of value (like travel, gifts, business meals, entertainment, or jobs/internships) to individuals (or their relatives) to obtain or retain business or to secure any improper advantage. These laws do not prohibit reasonable and customary business gifts, meals and entertainment, provided that there is a legitimate business purpose for providing the amenities (e.g., promoting IBM products and services, building goodwill and strengthening working relationships), and the amenities are business-appropriate in nature, venue, cost and frequency.

You may not, directly or through others or at the request of an IBMer, give any money, gift, amenity or other thing of value to any IBMer; executive, official, employee or representative of any client; supplier; business partner or any other organization, if doing so could influence or could give the appearance of influencing the organization's relationship with IBM.

You must obtain pre-approvals from your IBM contact before giving or receiving business amenities and gifts.

similar legend of IBM or any third party. Confidential information or material may include, but is not limited to, information and material related to past, present and future development, manufacturing activities, or personnel matters; marketing and business plans; pricing information; customer lists; technical specifications, drawings, and designs; prototypes; computer programs; and databases.

Do not disclose or use, without IBM's prior written permission, confidential information, materials or assets of IBM's or that IBM has received in confidence from third parties. You may not use IBM's or its third parties' information, materials, or assets after leaving IBM.

Avoid inadvertent disclosure – don't discuss IBM confidential information within earshot of anyone who is not authorized to receive that information, including family members or friends.

IBM's property, assets and information must only be used for IBM business purposes. This includes, for example, IBM's network, equipment, facilities, information and communication systems, connections to the Internet and supplies. It is never permissible to use IBM's systems for visiting Internet sites that feature sexual content or gambling, that advocate intolerance of others or that are inconsistent with IBM's business interests and Values.

IBM reserves the right to inspect all devices used by you to conduct IBM business to the maximum extent permitted by law. Accordingly, you have no reasonable expectation of privacy in any electronic device, whether owned by you, your employer or IBM, that you have used to conduct IBM business.

You must return all IBM assets, material, property and information you may have upon expiration or termination of your engagement with IBM, including information on personally owned electronic (BYO) devices, and you may not subsequently disclose any IBM information to any third party.

U.S. Trade Secret Protections: In the United States, trade secrets are protected under both federal and state law. It will not be a violation of this Code, and you will not be held liable under any U.S. federal or state trade secret law, if you disclose a trade secret in confidence to the government or an attorney solely for the purpose of reporting or investigating a suspected violation of law, or in a complaint or other filing in a proceeding if such filing is made under seal and does not disclose the trade secret except pursuant to court order.

2.2. Addressing External Inquiries and Social Media

If a journalist, consultant, securities analysts or other person who does not work for IBM asks you to provide information about IBM, you should identify yourself as a contractor and not an IBM employee and not provide them any information about IBM. Instead, refer them to IBM Communications or IBM Investor Relations.

When using social media, do not make statements or post information that could give the impression that you are employed by IBM or are speaking on behalf of IBM. Also do not post any information about IBM or third parties that could compromise intellectual property rights or confidential information.

2.3. Protecting and Using Assets Owned by Others

Third parties, like IBM's customers, trust IBM with their data and other assets. Use information and assets belonging to others (e.g., customers, business partners, suppliers) only to the extent authorized. Make sure you fully understand and follow all the terms and agreements that govern the use of third-party assets and information.

Do not accept or use information if you have reason to believe it may have been obtained improperly or illegally. Treat information about other organizations and individuals with sensitivity and discretion. Use it in the proper context and consistently with the purposes for which you were provided access. Share it only with those who have a legitimate need to know. Whenever possible, aggregate or anonymize information to avoid disclosing the identity of organizations or individuals.

2.4. Guarding Against Cyberthreats

We rely on IBMers and contractors who need access to IBM and customer data or assets to protect them. Understand and comply with IBM's information security policies and, if you are working on a customer site or network, the customer's security policies. Never share passwords. Participate in scheduled IBM cybersecurity training. Even well-intentioned actions, such as creating workarounds and short cuts to improve service delivery or downloading unapproved third-party software, can violate IBM and customer security policies and result in IT or data security breaches.

If you become aware of an IT or data security issue, report it immediately by calling the IBM Help Desk and selecting the "Cybersecurity Incident" option.

If you are involved in any work with a government entity or a GOE you must, at minimum, comply with the following:

Access to Information: Do not, directly or indirectly, obtain or seek to obtain oral or written information (including advance copies of solicitation or tender, planning and budgetary documents) that has not been made available to the general public or to all bidders or that is subject to restrictions regarding its use. It is your responsibility to make sure you have only appropriate information. If you are uncertain about any information, speak to your IBM contact.

Pre-bid Activities: Provided you are authorized to communicate with the purchasing entity on procurement matters, contact the customer only through the person(s) designated for the solicitation. Do not (i) prepare a solicitation document on behalf of a customer, even at the customer's request; (ii) submit any anonymous documents, such as white papers, to a customer; or (iii) encourage a customer to sign an agreement before an award or order is made to IBM. Doing so may have serious consequences for IBM, including preventing IBM from subsequently bidding on a project.

Hiring and Business Opportunities: Do not discuss business or employment opportunities that could personally benefit any employees of the purchasing entity involved in procurement planning or decisions (or their family members) before or during the course of a bid. Ethical and legal restrictions may apply – before and after IBM wins the bid – and on an ongoing basis during and after employment. If you receive any inquiries about opportunities at IBM from a customer representative, please refer the requestor to www.ibm.com.

Using Agents and Consultants; Teaming with Competitors: Prior approval of IBM Global Procurement and IBM Counsel is required before using any agents or consultants on public sector procurement deals. Teaming with competitors on public sector deals presents several risks – consult with your IBM contact first.

Contingency Fees: A contingency fee is a fee paid by one party to another for securing business. Some jurisdictions prohibit paying or receiving contingent fees for sales to a government entity or GOE. Get approval from your IBM contact before agreeing to contingent fees or other incentives.

If you have any questions, need help, or are aware of or suspect any violation of these guidelines or of a public sector procurement law, consult your IBM contact.

U.S. Government Contract Protections: When IBM's customer is in the public sector, IBM is that customer's "contractor." U.S. law provides for certain rights, remedies and protections for those individuals who, in connection with U.S. government contracts or funds, report internally or to certain government officials or entities information the individual reasonably believes is evidence of gross mismanagement or waste, abuse of authority, violation of law, or a substantial and specific danger to public health and safety.
