Gender equality, also known as sexual equality or equality of the sexes, is the condition in which all people have equal access to resources and opportunities, including economic involvement and decision-making, and in which all people are valued for their unique behaviours, goals, and needs. Gender equity and gender neutrality are activities and modes of thinking that aid in accomplishing the aim of gender equality, which is the ultimate objective. Gender equality may be achieved with the help of gender parity, which is a measurement of the gender balance in a particular context but is not the aim in and of it.

Equal representation is only one aspect of gender equality; it is closely linked to women's rights and frequently necessitates changes in policy.

Gender sensitization helps people comprehend that gender is not about women, but rather about "people," by giving them a precise and clear knowledge of what gender is.

Gender is a socially acquired behaviour based on social expectations of men and women. The most vulnerable elements of society in this circumstance are women and children. And it's the unjustified pressure put on boys and girls to adhere to pre-existing preconceptions of femininity and masculinity. Girls experience unwarranted social control, prejudice, and domination.

The SHE Cell and the Gender Equality Cell routinely offer debates, presentations, seminars, film screenings, and capacity-building programmes in the college as a complement to the academic initiatives for gender parity.

We in the college have specific facilities which we have provided for women in terms of: -

1. Safety and security
2. Counselling
3. Common rooms
